Domestic violence hurts the whole family

 Ethiopia Amharic (አማርኛ)
26 January 1998
[BHC-4450]

Domestic violence affects not only the victim but also the whole family. It not only leads to physical harm but also emotional and psychological trauma. The family members, including children, are also affected in various ways. This can lead to long-term consequences for individuals and the family as a whole.

In Ethiopia, as in many other countries, domestic violence is a serious issue that needs to be addressed. The government and various organizations are working towards raising awareness and providing support to victims and their families. It is important for everyone to understand the impact of domestic violence and take action to prevent it.

NSW Health Department